Hello,

In regards to the REAL ID, Arizona has an extension to be in compliance with the newer forms of ID. Are the old forms of IDs and or driver's license in compliance?

Thank you

Hello,

Please explain to me exactly how adult adoptees which do not have access to their "original birth certificates", are not denied liberties under the "real ID" act?

Closed adoption states redact, manipulate and distort birth certificate information and sequester this identifying information for multiple lifetimes. Thus, [the States] provide misleading information to adoptees about one's birth; which is then provided as evidence [to the Federal Government] in support of one's citizenship to obtain the real ID card.

In essence, adoptees will further loose civil liberties, for non-compliance of this act.

When you scroll over Arizona it states Arizona has an extension until October 15, 2016. Can you confirm that's for entering a federal facility?

ARIZONA: Beginning October 15, 2016, Arizona residents visiting a federal facility or military base, will need another form of ID unless the state driver license becomes REAL ID compliant by that date.

Also, what are other examples of "federal" facilities? Federal Courthouse?

Subject: Use of driver's license for air travel

There is conflicting information regarding IDs used for air travel on the Homeland Security Department websites. Some say that those holding California licenses will not be able to use them for ID purposes for air travel after October 10, 2016. This HSD website, however, says the following:

<<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-and-you-rumor-control#>>

"Until January 2018, if traveling by air, residents from ANY state are still able to use a driver's license, or any of the various other forms of identification accepted by the Transportation Security Administration..."

Can you please clarify?

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

While we have set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports this will not begin until Jan. 22, 2018.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

From the FAQ, I see the question "Why is DHS implementing air travel in stages?"

I just want to verify that as an IL license holder (not compliant with REAL ID), that until the year 2018 I will still be able to board a plane for domestic travel.

Additionally, the middle of the third line on the bullet point for January 22, 2018, says that there is a link available to click, but it does not have a hyperlink in the text.

Subject: Real id act.

Hi, im an Illinois resident who is currently in California, im planning to travel to Chicago in the next couple weeks. Im here visiting and taking care of a friend who was in an accident.

My question is, will my Illinois drivers license still be accepted at LAX and O'Hare airport? And or until when do I have to get proper documentation?

Hello,

Is there regulations on the requirements of EDL? I am looking on the website and I could not find any. Specifically I am looking for regulations that speak to how long the EDL can be termed for.

There is conflicting information regarding IDs used for air travel on the Homeland Security Department websites. Some say that those holding California licenses will not be able to use them for ID purposes for air travel after October 10, 2016. This HSD website, however, says the following:

<<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-and-you-rumor-control#>>

"Until January 2018, if traveling by air, residents from ANY state are still able to use a driver's license, or any of the various other forms of identification accepted by the Transportation Security Administration..."

Can you please clarify?

I am planning on taking a flight next month and I do not have any other form of ID required to take a flight without a Real ID. On Homeland Security's website it only says that Minnesota state drivers licenses may be accepted. Could you please explain what this means, whether I will be able to take a domestic flight next month without needing another form of ID, and if I do need another form of ID, how do I get it quickly enough for my flight next month?

The question came up, will the retired Military Identification card be accepted the same way at the TSA airport security check point as the new state issued drivers license required for airline travel?

I write a newsletter for a group of military retirees, mostly in Minnesota, and would like to put a small blurb in the next newsletter on the subject of the new Real ID.

When the Minnesota state drivers license system is up and running, will our retired Military IDs be as good as the new IDs?

Thanks

Im sure you get this question ALOT lately, and I am very sorry to bother you, but my family and I are from IL and will be traveling to FL in May 2016. I keep hearing rumor after rumor, or possibly a fact that we will need a U.S. passport to travel by plane within the U.S. Even after reading all of the assuring information your website offers about this concern, I still feel I need to ask someone personally. I have two babies I am traveling with and am just trying to get the facts straight. If, it is true that I need passports for all four of us, how early should I start applying? So sorry for the bothersome questions? I appreciate your help.

Yes, All states.

Unfortunately there is a lot of incorrect information being reported.

You will be fine for your trip, however, if you get an EDL license you won't have to worry about the states compliance on Jan. 22, 2018.

Subject: Question about upcoming travel

Greetings,

I'm going to be traveling at the end of March, 2016, and had some questions about my ability to fly with my current driver's license, which is set to expire on my birthday, a few weeks prior to my travel.

I'm a permanent resident of Washington State but currently finishing my BFA degree in Atlanta, Georgia, and will graduate and return to Washington this summer. I've requested an extension through the Department of Licensing in Washington, which they have in fact granted. It is simply a printed form that I can keep with me while driving.

Will the TSA allow an expired license with the addition of this printed form as valid ID when checking in for flights? Or do I need to bring another form of ID with me in order to check in without problems?

Thank you for your assistance in this matter.

Subject: Question about identification domestic flight.

To whom it may concern,

I plan to fly between California and Arizona on April 25th and 27th.

I am an alien who has a California driver's license and an Employment Authorization Card issued by USCIS.

However, my passport is expired and will not be renewed by the time I make my travel due to some issues within my own country.

I am wondering whether I can board an airplane with either my driver's license or my Employment Authorization Card.

Thank you in advance for your time and help!

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports, however, this will not begin until Jan. 22, 2018.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

I have a question in behalf of a friend who lives and resides in Chicago, Illinois. He's currently holding a driver's license originally issued in 2005 and has renewed twice. His license will expire next year, 2016. My question is will he be required to submit documentations again like he did the first time he applied for a driver's license?
 (his license says: Class D, Rest: B, type ORG).

Thank you very much.

Date:	2016/01/12 17:44:29
Type:	Note

Hi – I work in the Corporate Travel department at our company and am still a little confused on one thing on Friday's announcement to extend the need for a Real ID Act compliant driver's license to January 22, 2018. I understand that travelers will be allowed through airport security with current Minnesota driver's licenses through January 22, 2018 (not the Enhanced Driver's Licenses). This is great news!

My question pertains to government buildings and military bases. Because the first phase of Real ID Act was implemented in October of 2015, the non-enhanced, or non-compliant Minnesota driver's license was no longer accepted. With Friday's DHS announcement, will the non-compliant Minnesota's driver's license now be accepted in government buildings and military bases, or will they need to have an Enhanced Driver's License (or passport) to gain access? Below is posted on the Real ID FAQs online. It states that you must present a proper ID issued by a Real ID compliant state or a state with an extension – Minnesota is neither. What does this mean?

Can you please clarify.

Thank you very much.

Hello. I have a question about the REAL ID act and my Missouri license. I have a trip planned to see someone at Scott AFB and I just heard that my ID will no longer be accepted. And I don't have a passport.. How can I get on base without that? Will my birth certificate & social security card work along with my ID? Everything's paid for and I can't not go because I don't have the right ID.

The short answer is that the REAL ID Act does not govern the structure and componentry of encryption for systems. This is conducted at the State level and you would need to contact them regarding your questions.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

The short answer is that the REAL ID Act does not govern the structure and componentry of encryption for systems. This is conducted at the State level and you would need to contact them regarding your questions.

1) Okay

2) I am aware of the TSA link showing acceptable list of IDs for airline travel, but it does not answer my question posed in my original inquiry. Restated here, 'TSA states one of the acceptable forms of identification is "U.S. military ID (active duty or retired military and their dependents, and DoD civilians)". Is the Common Access Card (CAC) included in this statement as an acceptable form of identification to be used at a TSA checkpoint for CONUS commercial air travel?'

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

Subject: REAL ID and other ID for CONUS commercial air travel

We have two very pertinent questions concerning CONUS air travel on commercial airlines. Please RSVP.

- 1) With respect to REAL ID and according to 6 CFR Part 37, Office of the Secretary, DHS, Final Rule, the Summary states, "This final rule changes both document enrollment dates to October 1, 2020". Does this mean, in relation to CONUS commercial air travel, that non-REAL ID driver's licenses will still be accepted at TSA checkpoints up to this date?
- 2) Without respect to future REAL ID requirements, there are other forms of identification TSA lists as acceptable. TSA states one of the acceptable forms of identification is "U.S. military ID (active duty or retired military and their dependents, and DoD civilians)". Is the Common Access Card (CAC) included in this statement as an acceptable form of identification to be used at a TSA checkpoint for CONUS commercial air travel?

Answers to these questions will alleviate much confusion many millions are experiencing, wondering when/if they will have to hold a REAL ID driver's license or if their CAC will suffice for CONUS air travel. You may also want to include these questions in their entirety as FAQs for that reason. Thank you.

Respectfully,

(b)(6)

...and millions of other CONUS air travelers

The short answer is no: there is no general, mandatory periodic rule review requirement under the APA. There's an Executive Order that requires agencies to review their program and regulatory requirements to see if there's a need to revise, eliminate, reform, amend, etc., but this is not handled via the opening of a specific regulation's public comment period.

Unless an agency can clearly articulate how it proposes to change its regulatory requirements – and does so via a notice of proposed rulemaking's preamble, published in the Federal Register – agencies don't simply open up their regulations for broad public comment.

I see that the REAL ID Act regulation is 6 CFR Part 37.

Can you tell me when that regulation will be coming up for rule review? I assume that there is a mandatory periodic rule review and that at some point this regulation will be coming up for rule review and a new public comment period will open up.

Hello,
 I have a question for you, I have a client traveling from Minnesota to Florida in April, for a family vacation. The ticket has already been booked, will she need a passport for her and her child????
 If you could get back to me as soon as possible I would appreciate it.....
 Thank you

Subject: Domestic travel requirements from Illinois

To whom it may concern,

I've been reading and hearing from various sources that I may need a passport to travel to New Orleans from Chicago in March of this year. Can you verify if this is true please? Are other documents such as a birth certificate acceptable? I ask because I haven't ever needed a passport, and I know they can take some time to get and are not cheap. Can someone please clarify this for me please? With my tickets already bought, I want to make sure I don't run into any issues before my trip.

Thanks,

Hi. I read your information on your website but I just wanted to make sure I'm understanding it correctly. I was watching the news this morning and it sounded like it was effective immediately that anyone from MN would need a passport to travel since the state issued ID's weren't up to standard.

If I'm understanding your website, we will be able to continue to travel with our MN ID's until we hear further when a deadline is set. I have a domestic trip planned for the first week of February and time is running out if I need a passport and I hate to be denied my flight if I come to the airport with only my MN ID.

I wouldn't even be asking but morning news has confused me. 2 days ago, they said the ID's would need to be compliant as early as April and this mornings news said you better not travel without a passport and it sounds immediate. If you could just clarify this for me, I'd appreciate it.

Thanks,

To Whom It
May Concern,

I am having difficulty getting non-conflicting answer on the following question. Will ALL airport security checkpoints accept an Illinois drivers license during the months of January & February? I am a resident of Illinois and hold an Illinois drivers license. From what I can tell, I may use the Illinois drivers license at Midway & O'Hare, but there is nothing on the Orlando International Airport website and the only contact number is a recorded call with no information and no option to talk to a human being. The DHS site has conflicting info. One answer says 120 days notice to the public, another comment says January 20, 2016. So please, can someone with authority tell me what identification I need to bring with me to any United States airport in January and February of 2016?

Thank you,

Hello, I just learned that Illinois drivers licenses will soon not be considered acceptable for air travel. When will this occur and what will we need to do? What other forms are accepted or can you bring a birth certificate with a DL? What about an expired passport? Thousands of Illinois travelers will be flying in March for spring break and this is not well publicized or known.

Thanks for your reply.

I recently read somewhere stating that drivers licenses from certain states will not be accepted for boarding commercial airlines. My passport, from when I was a child, is expired and the processing time isn't quick enough before my flight. What are the solutions to this issue? I was never informed by the State letting me know my ID would present an issue when boarding a plane.

I live in Illinois, I have a family member in Federal Prison in Arkansas. As my state refused to comply with the new Real ID laws, do I have to do anything to get in to see that inmate? Will they still accept my Illinois driver's license when I drive down there?

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:
<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Hi,

I am planning a flight to South Dakota, and heard that a special Driver's License is required to board a airplane - to and from SD. The only reason I have a problem with that is because, I don't have money to get a new license.

I live in Washinton state, you know that state that doesn't want to follow any laws or program guidelines from the Federal Government.

I would LOVE to help you all get this state under compliance. It really bothers me when people fight every part of the Federal Government. There are things that I would like changed but, I still follow the law.

I believe that background checks are not trust worthy. I have a record. It is based on lies, being forced into convictions, and corrupt people in authority. I don't break laws - they are there to keep us safe. I also, have a letter of recommendation and character written 8 years after my first conviction. It was written by (b)(6), (b)(7)(C) of the Grandview Police Department, he recently retired. Would a Chief put his career and reputation on the line for a real criminal? I don't think so. There is a list of people involved in creating my record who have lost their jobs or were demoted. I knew a man who killed someone and said he would kill again. He didn't have a record. He broke the law constantly. Because his record was clean he was seen as a good citizen. I have a record and am seen as a blight. That is a perfect example of why background checks don't provide truth.

Please, let me know about the license question. I would like to go visit my mom.

(b)(6) - let me know you will be calling by text

Are driver authorization and driver privilege cards acceptable List B documents?

Yes. A driver authorization or driver privilege card issued by a State or outlying possession of the United States is an acceptable List B document, if it contains a photograph or identifying information such as name, date of birth, sex, height, color of eyes, and address. An employer must examine the document presented by its employee and determine whether it meets Form I-9 requirements. If the employer accepts a driver authorization or driver privilege card as a List B document, the employer must also examine a List C document establishing employment authorization.

More details can be found under "List B" at <http://www.uscis.gov/i-9-central/i-9-central-questions-answers/questions-and-answers>

Hi there -

I have been reading several things in relation to when the deadline for the enforcement is for states that are not compliant with the Real ID Enforcement.

I am scheduled to travel domestically January 31st and I only have a drivers license. What other form of identification will be accepted? I do not have a passport and cannot obtain one within the time frame of when this is enacted and to when I will travel.

Please advise.

Hello,

My name is (b)(6) and I have a few questions and concerns regarding the REAL ID Enforcement. I currently do not have a passport and have a valid Washington Drivers License, Birth Certificate, SSN Card with me. I am flying out to Ontario, CA tomorrow and return January 10th to Seattle, WA. My friend just forwarded me a story on this possibly taking place January 10th for WA state residents. I am curious if I will be unable to board to my return flight and am wondering if I need to cancel my trip ASAP. Can you please confirm with me how stern they will be on this? I'll just need to get back to work by Monday!

Thanks,

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Hello,

Unfortunately, I live in Illinois and I had a question regarding the REAL ID Enforcement process that will start here on January 10th.

On your FAQ page, it's written:

- Phase 4: Boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. A driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

In the case that an individual does not obtain a passport, are there other forms of ID that will be acceptable in conjunction with a driver's license? If so, what are they?

My family and I are traveling by air from IL to FL and back again between 2/24-3/2/16.

Is this correct: My 9 year old twins don't need any identification and my husband and I can still use our current, valid driver's licenses.

As I understand it, IL residents have 120 days to get/update their passports.

Hello,

We are getting a lot of calls with confused clients about what is required to board commercial flights for non-compliant Real ID states. So, for example, New Mexico is considered non-compliant, so will a New Mexico Drivers license work today to board domestic flights? Is there a time table for when they will not be able to board domestic flights with a drivers license that is "non-compliant"? How much warning will be given before that goes into effect and where will the warning be located?

I appreciate your help on this very much!

Hello

I recently received a message which included the following link along with the interactive map where you could check your state for compliance. According to this link, several states, including Illinois are NOT in compliance and do not currently have an extension

<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief>

However, back in September when we thought there was a possibility that they were going to implement Phase 4 of the Read ID Act in January of 2016, we received the following:

<https://www.travelandtransport.com/blog/corporate-travel/the-real-id-program-and-what-it-means-for-travelers-in-2016/>

In the message from September, the ONLY states not in compliance were Louisiana, Minnesota, New Hampshire, New York and American Samoa. However, with the latest communication and the interactive map, it appears other states, including Illinois, which were not on the original list are now not in compliance. Did something change? Did they have an extension that expired? My Illinois travelers are concerned and I would like to offer them an explanation. When I communicated with our travelers in September, Illinois was not on the list.

Many of the initial phases, which require Real ID approved identification to access secured federal facilities and military bases, have already gone into effect. The final phase of this initiative, which the DHS says will start "no sooner than 2016" could have an impact on travelers. It says that "a driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with a second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft." That means you'll have to have a driver's license or ID card that complies with the Real ID's rules to get on a plane. Most of our 50 states and territories are now compliant or have extensions in place with the DHS that will allow their IDs to continue to be used. If you're in one of the following states or territories, however, you need to pay attention:

- Louisiana
- Minnesota
- New Hampshire
- New York
- American Samoa

Thank you for anything you can share to help me understand.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

I have a passport but my wife does not.

We are currently at our second home in Arizona and returning to Illinois at the end of this month.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Hello,

Can you tell me, what's the status of South Carolina's compliance with the Real ID law?

Do you know when travelers with S.C. driver's licenses will need alternative form of identification for airplanes?

Will the rules, when implemented, also apply to federal buildings?

Best,

I am from Washington state and will be traveling with my family to Hawaii next week. Two of my sons have expired passports, and one has an enhanced license and other has a standard license. Will we encounter any kind of issue with boarding our flights?

Also, the TSA website does not list a specific date for enforcement. It still lists a regular driver's license as suitable identification to board a commercial airplane.

Thanks so much.

I live in Missouri, a state that has elected to NOT comply with the REAL ID Act. I have a driver's license issued Nov. 2015, but my husband's is in the old format and will not expire for 2 more years.

We fly frequently and I would like not to have to take my passport everywhere we go. Is there a ID card that we can obtain that will be acceptable identification in the future?

How are they obtained?

Subject: ID for flying on a plane

I'm from Illinois and I have to fly to Florida in February 2016. My driver's license is no longer valid for flying on aircraft as of January 10, 2016.

What am I supposed to do? It is too late to get a passport.

What else is considered a valid form of ID in order to fly?

Thank you,

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

Hello ,

My name is (b)(6) I currently reside in New Jersey. I have a question regards to the "Real ID Act".

For Christmas Dec 2015 – I was given a airplane ticket to Puerto Rico for Feb 26- March 6- of 2016, I do not have a passport as of right now .

Will this Act affect me in any way as far as using my driver identification I.D to travel on these dates ?

Thank You.

Subject: REAL ID and other ID for CONUS commercial air travel

We have two very pertinent questions concerning CONUS air travel on commercial airlines. Please RSVP.

- 1) With respect to REAL ID and according to 6 CFR Part 37, Office of the Secretary, DHS, Final Rule, the Summary states, "This final rule changes both document enrollment dates to October 1, 2020". Does this mean, in relation to CONUS commercial air travel, that non-REAL ID driver's licenses will still be accepted at TSA checkpoints up to this date?
- 2) Without respect to future REAL ID requirements, there are other forms of identification TSA lists as acceptable. TSA states one of the acceptable forms of identification is "U.S. military ID (active duty or retired military and their dependents, and DoD civilians)". Is the Common Access Card (CAC) included in this statement as an acceptable form of identification to be used at a TSA checkpoint for CONUS commercial air travel?

Answers to these questions will alleviate much confusion many millions are experiencing, wondering when/if they will have to hold a REAL ID driver's license or if their CAC will suffice for CONUS air travel. You may also want to include these questions in their entirety as FAQs for that reason. Thank you.

Respectfully,

(b)(6)

...and millions of other CONUS air travelers

Hello my husband and I live in Minnesota and will be traveling domestically in April. Since Minnesota is a non-compliant state for the Real ID enforcement, we are hoping that an enhanced drivers license will allow us to travel and not be required to apply for a passport just to get on a plane to go to a different state.

There is so much information out there and it's all so confusing. We just want to be able to get on a plane domestically and not worry about being turned away when we get to the airport for lack of proper identification.

Thank you.

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Subject: ID confusion for travel

We have a family vacation booked for February 20 from Chicago to Hawaii. My husband, myself and two kids, one which just turned 18 and another that just got her drivers license. The kids do not have passports. Would it be acceptable to go have state ID'S made or should we bring their social security cards? There will not be time to get a passport. What do you recommend?

Thank you,

Hello,

In regards to the REAL ID Enforcement and looking at <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief> the deadline for CA is January 10th 2016.

Reviewing <http://www.dhs.gov/current-status-states-territories> states CA has been extended until October 10 2016.

Which is accurate?

Thank you,

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

To whom it may concern,

I have just learned that IL is 1 of the 5 states listed as "non-compliant" as it relates to the REAL ID enforcement. I am scheduled to fly out 1/11/16 (and 2 additional flights in the next 3 weeks) and I do not have a passport. I am a resident of IL with a valid driver's license and TSA pre-check status. Is this going to be an issue? Can you shed some light on the timeline as to how long I have in order to get a passport? They generally take some time to acquire as I understand it. Thanks!

Subject: Flying in February...have MO license

My husband and I are flying to Las Vegas from St.Louis MO in February and then back a few days later. We are going on a business trip for Matco Tools national expo. My question is, will our valid MO drivers license still be accepted as a valid form of id for us to board and fly to and from expo? We do not have passports as neither of us have ever flown out of the country, but want to be sure we will not be denied access and ability to fly. Thank you for any advise and/or information you can provide.

Thanks, (b)(6)

I am a Missouri drivers license holder scheduled to travel on January 14 2016 to Mesa Arizona and return to Springfield Missouri on January 21st. Will I be able to travel through security and board my flights with my MO drivers license on those dates? Its being bandied about in the media that my license will not be accepted after January 10th. Is this correct? I sure would appreciate some clarity on this matter. Thanks for your time!!

I have read several articles concerning the State of Illinois drivers license not being enough identification to fly domestically beginning January 2016. I am unable to find any recent articles concerning this. Could you please advise if I need to purchase a passport if I plan on traveling within the United States or if my current Illinois drivers license will be enough.

Thank you in advance for clearing this matter up before I spend $135.00.

Your original request was "what do I need?" for travel purposes which is why I enclosed the information regarding the current status of TSA enforcement. Further I provided the TSA link of acceptable identifications because you only inquired about the FOID and CCW.

Your FOID card or conceal carry permit do not establish legal lawful presence in the United States and therefore do not meet the REAL ID requirements.

You will still be able to travel with your IL license until the TSA enforcement date begins after a lengthy notification period.

I'm not sure you understood my request. I want to know if my FOID card or my conceal carry permit is acceptable as Real ID. Background checks were needed for me to obtain, so I'd this good enough to let me fly try to/from Illinois. I already read the link you sent me but still does not help me with an answer.

If you fly internationally you will need either a passport or passport card. WA state does however offer the Enhanced Drivers License which can act in lieu of a passport.

I just read the article about WA. state driver's license not being enough to fly to Canada. Why have we not heard about this before and what else is needed on a License? I have a Passport but believe it is up next year....I have family in Canada and how in the world do things like this happen without people knowing.? What more is needed that is not already shown on my passport/license. This all is going "overkill" on rules and yet the criminals still run free. I will be 83 this year and am appauled at this country and the rules that don't work.. security is not working now so what else can be done that is not being done now?

I don't know where this letter is going...I am a WA state American citizen and think all of these rules are made up by men who cannot sleep at night. I would appreciate some writing back and if this article I read is even true.,. Supposedly 4-5 states are not according to rules required...WA being one of them

Thank for reading this

Hello DHS,

My son is 14 years old and will be traveling unaccompanied to Oklahoma on 9 Jan 2016. He will be returning home to California on 3 Feb 2016 unaccompanied as well. I have a concern regarding the REAL ID act and how it affects those entering California after Jan 10, 2016.

Which forms of ID will he need ? I was just made aware of the Passport being a valid ID but I am unsure if this is only for those 18 years and older. I have made an appointment to renew his passport for this reason.

Please indicate to me if a US Passport is necessary for him, or which other forms of ID are acceptable (birth certificate, school ID, social security).

Thank you for your time.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:
<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

On Jan. 10, 2016 enforcement at nuclear power plants, Federal facilities and military bases will begin for IL license holders, not TSA enforcement.

Subject: Question re: Timing of Enforcement for REAL ID in Illinois

Hello,

I am unclear about the new ID standards in Illinois. There is conflicting timing/information on your website about needing a passport to travel domestically.

This page indicates I don't need a passport to travel domestically from Illinois yet, and I'll get 120 days notice: <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-public-faqs>

but this page indicates Illinois is non-compliant and enforcement begins 1/10/16: <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#>

Which is it?

I am traveling for business later this month, so I need to know if I need to get a new passport with my married name since I am a newlywed and just legally changed my name (on my IL drivers license only).

Please help!

Thanks,

Date:	2016/01/05 19:06:21
Type:	Note

We have two very pertinent questions concerning CONUS air travel on commercial airlines. Please RSVP.

- 1) With respect to REAL ID and according to 6 CFR Part 37, Office of the Secretary, DHS, Final Rule, the Summary states, "This final rule changes both document enrollment dates to October 1, 2020". Does this mean, in relation to CONUS commercial air travel, that non-REAL ID driver's licenses will still be accepted at TSA checkpoints up to this date?

- 2) Without respect to future REAL ID requirements, there are other forms of identification TSA lists as acceptable. TSA states one of the acceptable forms of identification is "U.S. military ID (active duty or retired military and their dependents, and DoD civilians)". Is the Common Access Card (CAC) included in this statement as an acceptable form of identification to be used at a TSA checkpoint for CONUS commercial air travel?

Answers to these questions will alleviate much confusion many millions are experiencing, wondering when/if they will have to hold a REAL ID driver's license or if their CAC will suffice for CONUS air travel. You may also want to include these questions in their entirety as FAQs for that reason. Thank you.

Respectfully,

My question is specifically related to the states that don't meet the "Real ID" requirement. Missouri and Illinois currently do not meet that requirement and it is my understanding that their extension expires on Jan 10,2016. Will this effect an employer's ability to accept those state issued DL as a list B document?

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

Are driver authorization and driver privilege cards acceptable List B documents?

Yes. A driver authorization or driver privilege card issued by a State or outlying possession of the United States is an acceptable List B document, if it contains a photograph or identifying information such as name, date of birth, sex, height, color of eyes, and address. An employer must examine the document presented by its employee and determine whether it meets Form I-9 requirements. If the employer accepts a driver authorization or driver privilege card as a List B document, the employer must also examine a List C document establishing employment authorization.

More details can be found under "List B" at <http://www.uscis.gov/i-9-central/i-9-central-questions-answers/questions-and-answers>

Hello DHS,

My son is 14 years old and will be traveling unaccompanied to Oklahoma on 9 Jan 2016. He will be returning home to California on 3 Feb 2016 unaccompanied as well. I have a concern regarding the REAL ID act and how it affects those entering California after Jan 10, 2016. Which forms of ID will he need ? I was just made aware of the Passport being a valid ID but I am unsure if this is only for those 18 years and older. I have made an appointment to renew his passport for this reason.

Please indicate to me if a US Passport is necessary for him, or which other forms of ID are acceptable (birth certificate, school ID, social security).

Thank you for your time.

Thank you for the feedback on the site.

There has been no change in the travel documents for domestic flights. DHS has not announced the schedule for REAL ID enforcement at airports. Any dates that you see in the press are speculation and not based on any statement made by DHS or TSA. You may continue to use your New York State driver's license for boarding aircraft for domestic travel. New York has an extension through, at least, October 10, 2016, meaning Federal agencies can continue to accept driver's license issued by New York. That extension is renewable if the state continues to demonstrate progress towards compliance.

The date of enforcement for Washington State refers to enforcement for purpose of accessing Federal facilities – not for boarding aircraft. I can understand the confusion and will refer your comment to the right people.

Best Wishes,

Ted Sobel

DHS requires visitors to present government-issued identification for access to its facilities. For visitors presenting a state-issued driver's license or identification card, DHS may only accept such documents if they are issued by states that are REAL ID compliant. If the state that issued your license is listed as noncompliant, please bring an alternate form of government-issued photo ID – such as a passport or Federal employee, military, or veteran identification card to facilitate access.

Subject: DHS webpages re: travel document changes

Dear Staff at the Office of State-Issued Identification Support:

Thanks to a friend who sent us relevant DHS links, members of my family have been alerted to DHS changes in travel documents required for domestic flights. I am unhappy that when I renewed my New York State drivers license in July 2015, NO ONE told me about the fact that a regular license could not be used for domestic travel after October 2016. I would have obtained an enhanced license then. I also found the webpage of “Public FAQs” very confusing, if not out of date. The links for commenting on that page and the other FAQ page (for states, which was even more confusing) do not work. I also got a pop-up asking me to complete a survey about the webpage but none of the choices fit my situation and it did not allow me to leave comments. This is not very meaningful in terms of providing feedback.

The “Public FAQ” page was “last published” on Dec. 28, 2015, but as seen below, the statement that one does not need a passport is confusing if not contradictory since there is no clarification about “when “120 days” of notice begins/began or when “enforcement at airports begins.” There is no mention of or link to information that would update this statement, such as the interactive map at <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#> At that site, the information for Washington State says that starting Jan. 10, 2016, those residents “will be subject to enforcement.” That’s very different from what is provided on the FAQ page!

I hope some improvements can be made in access to information, so there will not be a lot of unhappy people, and chaos, at airports in the months to come. One simple fix would be updating the FAQ page.

Sincerely yours,

Do I need a passport for domestic air travel starting January 2016?

A: No. DHS is in the process of scheduling plans for implementing REAL ID enforcement at airports. DHS will ensure that the traveling public has ample notice (at least, 120 days) before any changes are made that might affect their travel planning.

Until enforcement at the airports begins, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept state-issued driver’s licenses and identification cards from all states, as well other forms of acceptable identification listed on the TSA website.

Hello,

I am unclear about the new ID standards in Illinois. There is conflicting timing/information on your website about needing a passport to travel domestically.

This page indicates I don't need a passport to travel domestically from Illinois yet, and I'll get 120 days notice: <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-public-faqs>

but this page indicates Illinois is non-compliant and enforcement begins 1/10/16: <http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#>

Which is it?

I am traveling for business later this month, so I need to know if I need to get a new passport with my married name since I am a newlywed and just legally changed my name (on my IL drivers license only).

Please help!

I am an Illinois Resident and I have concerns over an upcoming flight of mine dated January 23rd 2016 and January 25th respectively. This is a domestic flight but I have concerns that my Illinois ID will not be accepted at security check points. Furthermore I do not have the funds for an express passport. I'm filling out paper work for a passport however that process will take 4-6 weeks. Will my Identification card from Illinois still be valid?

Best,

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

Are driver authorization and driver privilege cards acceptable List B documents?

Yes. A driver authorization or driver privilege card issued by a State or outlying possession of the United States is an acceptable List B document, if it contains a photograph or identifying information such as name, date of birth, sex, height, color of eyes, and address. An employer must examine the document presented by its employee and determine whether it meets Form I-9 requirements. If the employer accepts a driver authorization or driver privilege card as a List B document, the employer must also examine a List C document establishing employment authorization.

We have a major meeting coming up at the end of the month in Las Vegas and the attendees come from all 50 states. Several states according to your website [<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#>] are subject to enforcement starting Jan 16th.

Can you let me know if there are plans in the works to either grant an extension or to enforce the new regulations?

Thanks.

Subject: ID for boarding a plane

To Whom It May Concern,

I am having difficulty getting non-conflicting answer on the following question. Will ALL airport security checkpoints accept an Illinois drivers license during the months of January & February? I am a resident of Illinois and hold an Illinois drivers license. From what I can tell, I may use the Illinois drivers license at Midway & O'Hare, but there is nothing on the Orlando International Airport website and the only contact number is a recorded call with no information and no option to talk to a human being. The DHS site has conflicting info. One answer says 120 days notice to the public, another comment says January 20, 2016. So please, can someone with authority tell me what identification I need to bring with me to any United States airport in January and February of 2016?

Thank you,

(b)(6) .....I really wish that you could reply to my original concern at the bottom of the page. Surely someone in your position in "Threat Prevention and Security" could come up with some type of remedy for my problem. I already have a letter from Homeland Security showing that I jumped through all their hoops, but have been told by security that this is only a form letter and of no use to them. It shows my Redress Control Number on it -(b)(6) and I enter that on all reservations with all airlines, but nothing seems to help me get through.

Do you have ANY suggestions for me? I sincerely hope you do.

Subject: Real ID

I have been reading about this new program, and wonder how I can strengthen my ID's when flying. I am stopped every year at the airports. Doesn't seem to matter if it is a domestic flight or an international flight. It is to the point now that I am used to being stopped and expect it. I would just like to be able to travel without these inconveniences. I have already provided Homeland Security with all the information they require, and they always send me a letter. (copy attached). Even when I show this letter at the airports, I am still detained. Last year when entering the USA in Houston returning from our annual vacation in Puerto Vallarta, I was questioned about the letter, and told that all it was is a form letter and meaningless.

Is there ANYTHING that I can show that will get me through the security lines quicker, and allow me to print my boarding passes without going to the counter and being cross examined?

Two years ago, when detained in Houston, the officer I spoke with commented to me (b)(6) - I bet we see more of you than your wife does" Very nice, but it still doesn't eliminate this extra step I must always take.

I would appreciate any help yo can provide me. We leave for Puerto Vallarta Mexico on January 6th. I have my letter, but wish I had more. I look forward to hearing from you with any suggestions you might have.

(b)(6)

I can also provide you with a copy of my passport, if you think that this would help.

Hi! I've just found out about the Real ID Act. I have an Illinois drivers license. My passport was stolen October 30th and I haven't replaced it yet. Good morning, I have a question regarding an upcoming trip I am planning. I will be flying from PIA in Peoria, Illinois to MCO in Orlando. We have a connecting flight out of Atlanta. What identification will we need for this travel since the State of Illinois does not have the "official" new license or identification. I have a current Illinois driver's license, what else would be needed. I do have my birth certificate. I do NOT have a current passport (actually the one I have is over 30 yrs, old and certainly not enough time to get a new one.) We will be travelling in four weeks.

Thank you for any help you might be able to give to me regarding this matter.

Subject: DC License and Real ID Act

I have a DC drivers license that was issued in 2011 and does not expire until 2019. DC is a REAL ID-compliant state, and its DMV website says that those whose licenses expire in the future will not have to have a REAL ID license until expiration — in my case in 2019. I want to verify with DHS that my current DC license that was issued before REAL ID licenses were available will be valid in the future to enter federal buildings and at airports and that I do not have to get a new license prior to my 2019 expiration — since it was issued by a compliant state.

From the DC DMV website:

Is my current license or identification card still valid?

Yes. Your current driver license or identification card is valid until its expiration date and will be accepted for federal purposes (such as entering federal buildings and boarding airplanes). When you renew your existing credential (which may not expire until April 2022), you will then need to bring in your documents to revalidate your identity, Social Security number, and residency.

Thank you.

Yes. A driver authorization or driver privilege card issued by a State or outlying possession of the United States is an acceptable List B document, if it contains a photograph or identifying information such as name, date of birth, sex, height, color of eyes, and address. An employer must examine the document presented by its employee and determine whether it meets Form I-9 requirements. If the employer accepts a driver authorization or driver privilege card as a List B document, the employer must also examine a List C document establishing employment authorization.

Hello,

I am flying from Missouri to Georgia and back at the end of January and just heard that my Missouri Driver's License may not be accepted to board the flight. I do not have a passport or military ID. I am not sure what to do, because even if I do apply for a passport, I won't receive it in time.

What can I do so I am able to board the flight?

Thank You!

I have a DC drivers license that was issued in 2011 and does not expire until 2019. DC is a REAL ID-compliant state, and its DMV website says that those whose licenses expire in the future will not have to have a REAL ID license until expiration — in my case in 2019. I want to verify with DHS that my current DC license that was issued before REAL ID licenses were available will be valid in the future to enter federal buildings and at airports and that I do not have to get a new license prior to my 2019 expiration — since it was issued by a compliant state.

From the DC DMV website:

Is my current license or identification card still valid?

Yes. Your current driver license or identification card is valid until its expiration date and will be accepted for federal purposes (such as entering federal buildings and boarding airplanes). When you renew your existing credential (which may not expire until April 2022), you will then need to bring in your documents to revalidate your identity, Social Security number, and residency.

Thank you.

First of all, Thank you for your quick response!

From what I understand in your e-mail, we will be able to get on the flights to and from MN at the end of February 2016 because dates have not been set to enforce the Real ID at the airports yet and our regular driver's licenses will be accepted by TSA. Whew, thank you! I wasn't sure if we'd have time to get enhanced driver's licenses or passports .Now we don't have to be concerned with that.

I appreciate the links you sent as well. They are very helpful.

Have a good day!

Hello,

My family and I purchased tickets for flights going out of the Minneapolis airport in Feb 2016. I've been hearing concerns about the state of MN being non compliant with the Real ID standards. We still have the normal MN state issued drivers licenses.

Are we going to be able to fly out of MN and back in for our upcoming vacation? I'm not finding the date as to when the air travel restriction may go into place. I only find wording that says 2016, but not a specific date.

Thank you

I have been reading about this new program, and wonder how I can strengthen my ID's when flying. I am stopped every year at the airports. Doesn't seem to matter if it is a domestic flight or an international flight. It is to the point now that I am used to being stopped and expect it. I would just like to be able to travel without these inconveniences. I have already provided Homeland Security with all the information they require, and they always send me a letter.

(copy attached). Even when I show this letter at the airports, I am still detained. Last year when entering the USA in Houston returning from our annual vacation in Puerto Vallarta, I was questioned about the letter, and told that all it was is a form letter and meaningless.

Is there ANYTHING that I can show that will get me through the security lines quicker, and allow me to print my boarding passes without going to the counter and being cross examined?

Two years ago, when detained in Houston, the officer I spoke with commented to me "Mr. Nelson - I bet we see more of you than your wife does" Very nice, but it still doesn't eliminate this extra step I must always take.

I would appreciate any help yo can provide me. We leave for Puerto Vallarta Mexico on January 6th. I have my letter, but wish I had more. I look forward to hearing from you with any suggestions you might have.

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

I can also provide you with a copy of my passport, if you think that this would help.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Hello. I live in Washington state and read the article that says our drivers license will not be enough for us to board a flight. We have a family vacation in 2 months and need to know how we can prepare for this

Any information is appreciated.

So if I am in a non compliant state, due to travel in April of 2016, how does this work.
 I do have a passport issued years ago, but I have moved, so does that too need to be updated.
 What about others who plan to travel with me as well from non compliant state of MO. What will they need to do.

OSIIS,

I recently read the article on the Real ID Act.

I have planned a trip to Nevada in February 2016 and I am confused as to the proper ID needed to board my flight.

I have a current Illinois drivers license, Illinois FOID card, and an original Social Security card for identification.

Will I be able to board my flight out of OHARE airport to McCarren airport without rejection?

Is it true that we have to have Passport to prove real ID and that driver's photo license will not be acceptable to board a plane from PDX in Oregon to California? We will be traveling on Jan. 13.

Hi

I live in MN and MN is a non-compliant state. This means that I will need a passport or other form of ID to board a domestic flight.

My question is, do I need a passport or other form of accepted identification to get a gate pass? My underage son flies as an unaccompanied minor to his father's in Washington State in the summer, then back to MN before school starts. I usually get a gate pass so I can bring him to the gate before take off and to meet him at the gate when he flies home.

Do I need a passport in order to get a gate pass for these occasions? I don't plan on flying myself.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Hello,

My family and I purchased tickets for flights going out of the Minneapolis airport in Feb 2016. I've been hearing concerns about the state of MN being non compliant with the Real ID standards. We still have the normal MN state issued drivers licenses. Are we going to be able to fly out of MN and back in for our upcoming vacation? I'm not finding the date as to when the air travel restriction may go into place. I only find wording that says 2016, but not a specific date.

Thank you.

Hello,

I live in MN( only non compliant state for the Real ID Act)....At this point can I still use a regular drivers license to board a plane(get through TSA checkpoint at airport) for a domestic flight? I have been reading so many different things it is confusing. MN offers Enhances Drivers Licenses...do I NEED one of those? Please shed some light for me...as I said I keep reading so many different conflicting things.Idont know what is right. Thanks so much.

Please clarify what is needed to board a domestic flight in CA and the other 52 states in the US.

Did I read an article correctly that a DL is not enough? If I do not have a passport, and need to fly from CA to Las Vegas, the Washington, DC, what will I need?

I am a current resident of Missouri. I travel to California to visit family on a regular basis. I have just learned that my Missouri drivers license will not be accepted as a form of id at the airports. I need to know what I need to do now that I am unable to use this form of identification to board a plane? I don't have a passport as I never leave the United States. I am not even sure I am able to obtain a passport as I am currently a convicted felon still on supervision. Any information that you can provide me as to what I am able to use as ID for boarding flights will be helpful and appreciated.

I have a question, my son and I are supposed to fly to Las Vegas from Seattle on 1/10 and only have a drivers license, we do not have a passport, do we have to have rush to the DOL for an additional license, and if so it would only be a black/white paper copy until a color photo arrives 2 weeks later. We are panicking since we leave in one week. Please advise on my question. Can we still fly with only our drivers license and nothing else? Thank u

My sister and I will be flying from Missouri to Florida in October. All the information I am reading is very confusing. So I have a few questions.

Will we need a passport to fly to Florida with MO drivers license?

Can we get the passport card or do we HAVE TO get the much more expensive book. Also where does Hawaii fit into all this? We will be traveling there in 2017.

Thank you.

Gentlemen,

Your website is entirely too confusing for your target audience.
 You are a service organization, you should be more aware.

On the following page:

<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief>

You write:

- Phase 4: Boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. A driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

However, finding a link to what those IDs are is difficult and not even on the DHS page. I eventually found the link to the TSA and followed it. However it does not list a restriction on drivers licenses and additionally does not list " an acceptable second form of ID" as per your website, it only list primary forms that can be use instead of a drivers license.

Please clarify your website so that an average american citizen can follow it.

Subject: State Issued Identification Support Question

Dear Sir or Madam:

I recently read an article about compliance with Homeland Security standards for identification to board an airplane in the future. Typically a valid driver license or state ID was sufficient. However, some states do not comply with Homeland Security Standards and will no longer be sufficient ID.

I understand that five states are near a deadline to ask for an extension. I also understand that nineteen states have requested and received an extension to October 10, 2016 to come into compliance. I am a resident in one of the nineteen states given the extension: Michigan.

Michigan has a driver license program with two levels of verification: a.) Standard and b.) Enhanced.

The Enhanced program requires that information be sent by the State to the Office of Homeland Security for review, verification and acceptance. The Enhanced Michigan Driver License is sufficient ID to make a land crossing at the US-Canada border. It is fully acceptable to the Immigration Staff at Windsor/Detroit and Sarnia/Port Huron.

Given that Homeland Security has approved this Enhanced Driver License (It takes 3 – 4 weeks to obtain one at a higher fee), will the Michigan Enhanced Driver License also be refused as insufficient to board an airline flight after October 10, 2016. Or was the Homeland Security Review and acceptance sufficient ID to allow boarding.

Thanks for your response.

Sincerely,

(b)(6)

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

I live in New Mexico and I understand our drivers licenses may no longer be accepted to board a domestic flight.

I work for the USDA Forest Service and have been a permanent federal employee for over 20 years and have a background check. We have a LincPass card that we now must use to log into computers. It has my name and photo on it. Will that work to board a flight? If not, would TSA consider adding other federal employee IDs as acceptable as they do military IDs?

Thanks,

In March I am flying to Ohio to Cleveland Clinic, I understand as of January 1st drivers licenses from Illinois will not be able to be used for identification. I don't fly out of the country and don't have a passport and have no reason to get one since I never leave the United States. What other form of ID will I need. I can get an Illinois IDcard but I would assume that would not be accepted if the drivers license is not. Please advise me on this.

Subject: Passport for flights within the US

My sister and I will be flying from Missouri to Florida in October. All the information I am reading is very confusing. So I have a few questions.

Will we need a passport to fly to Florida with MO drivers license?

Can we get the passport card or do we HAVE TO get the much more expensive book. Also where does Hawaii fit into all this? We will be traveling there in 2017.

Thank you,

Hello!

I learned today that Illinois is not compliant with the REAL ID act and IL drivers licenses will not be sufficient forms of ID to board federally regulated aircraft after January 10, 2016.

My husband and I are flying to Colorado from Ohare airport (Chicago) January 25, 2016 and neither of us have current passports. At this point, there is not enough time for us to obtain passports. What other identification do we need to bring so we can board our flight?

While working for Kansas City Power & Light I was required to have a Commercial Driver's License with a "Hazardous Materials" endorsement. In 2008 my fingerprints were submitted for a fingerprint based security threat assessment. I received a letter from TSA on December 6, 2008 that has a "Determination of NO Security Threat." I retired from Kansas City Power & Light (after nearly 32 years) in 2011. When I renewed my driver's license I had the "Hazardous Materials" endorsement removed because it was no longer needed. Since I still have a Commercial Driver's License does this count as REAL ID?

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:
<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Subject: New REAL ID law regarding air travel

Hi,

I currently live in Illinois and saw the notice that my state issues drivers license will no longer be accepted as a valid form of identification as of January 10th, 2016.

I have a trip planned for January 16th-20th via American Airlines and this short notice won't allow me enough time to acquire a passport.

Will there be any sort of grace period for air travel? I know passports usually take 4-6 weeks to get, which would leave me stuck for my trip.

Any information would be greatly appreciated.

Thanks in advance,

(b)(6)

-a concerned Illinois traveler

Question:

We will be flying in January and May and have Illinois Drivers Licenses. What other form of identification will we need and when?

I read the Phases but wasn't sure what this means--A driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

Thanks!

Subject: REAL ID Question

Hello-

I read on the TSA web site (<https://www.tsa.gov/travel/security-screening/identification>) that "A weapon permit is not an acceptable form of identification.", and I'd like to inquire as to why. I have a resident CCW permit for my home State, as well as a couple of non-resident permits for other States. One of the permits I have required fingerprinting, while all three required fairly extensive background checks. With the requirements for these permits being much stricter than for a Drivers License, and criminal background checks being necessary for each of them, I'd like to know why they would not suffice for identification under REAL ID. Thanks!

Gentlemen,

Your website is entirely too confusing for your target audience.
 You are a service organization, you should be more aware.

On the following page:

<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief>

You write:

- * Phase 4: Boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. A driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft.

However, finding a link to what those IDs are is difficult and not even on the DHS page. I eventually found the link to the TSA and followed it. However it does not list a restriction on drivers licenses and additionally does not list " an acceptable second form of ID" as per your website, it only list primary forms that can be use instead of a drivers license.

Please clarify your website so that an average american citizen can follow it.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Hello,

I was reading the FAQ for the REAL ID on your website and I am still not fully understanding, so I am hoping someone can help me. I have a "regular" Minnesota drivers license. With the new laws that will be in effect in 2016 regarding valid identification, is my drivers license still a valid form of identification for a flight to Texas at the end of February 2016, or will I need a passport or an enhanced ID for this flight?

Thank you for your help!

Type:	Note

Dear DHS,

I noted that the DHS is going to start phased enforcement of the REAL ID Act (<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#>).

My primary questions is: Can truck drivers without a REAL ID Act compliant state issued identification enter ports or other federally regulated areas overseen by TSA and/or DHS to make pick-ups or deliveries using non-compliant REAL ID Act state issued Commercial Driver's Licenses (CDL's).

Currently, some drivers get a Transportation Worker Identification Credential (TWIC) which allows them direct entry to ports or other federally controlled areas. However, some drivers (and my company) pay a TWIC certified driver service to strictly supervise and guide the truck drivers while in the port or other federally regulated area for their pickups or deliveries.

Further question: If a TWIC card was issued based on a non-compliant REAL ID Act issued state CDL, will that TWIC card be valid after the new phased enforcement of the REAL ID Act for entry into a port or federally regulated area?

Last question: Will services such as the one my company uses, where a TWIC certified driver service supervises a non-TWIC CDL driver while making deliveries or pickups at ports or other federally regulated areas, be allowed to accept non-compliant REAL ID Act state issued CDL's as proof of personal identification?

Any help you can give me answering these questions would be greatly appreciated. Thank you kindly for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Big "G" Express, Inc. (Shelbyville, TN) - my employer. a freight transportation company

I learned today that Illinois is not compliant with the REAL ID act and IL drivers licenses will not be sufficient forms of ID to board federally regulated aircraft after January 10, 2016.

My husband and I are flying to Colorado from Ohare airport (Chicago) January 25, 2016 and neither of us have current passports. At this point, there is not enough time for us to obtain passports. What other identification do we need to bring so we can board our flight?

I retired from Kansas City Power & Light (after nearly 32 years) in 2011. When I renewed my driver's license I had the "Hazardous Materials" endorsement removed because it was no longer needed. Since I still have a Commercial Driver's License does this count as REAL ID?

Hi,

I currently live in Illinois and saw the notice that my state issues drivers license will no longer be accepted as a valid form of identification as of January 10th, 2016.

I have a trip planned for January 16th-20th via American Airlines and this short notice won't allow me enough time to acquire a passport.

Will there be any sort of grace period for air travel? I know passports usually take 4-6 weeks to get, which would leave me stuck for my trip.

Any information would be greatly appreciated.

Thanks in advance,

The REAL ID Act is being enforced as we speak. The state of California has received an extension for 2016 however, Illinois has not and therefore subject to enforcement.

Presenting an IL Driver's License should cause the guards to ask for an alternate id, such as a passport, or have an alternate procedure in place.

The facility in CA should be able to state those requirements to you.

Thank you,

Is a real ID required to apply for a US Passport? I applied for a passport and presented my state (WV)issued drivers license with the application. I was later contacted by the passport office stating that my drivers license was insufficient for passport purposes due to the fact that it states "not for federal identification." The travel.state.gov site lists primary identification as a fully valid drivers license and does not specify if it must be a Real ID. It is my understanding that my current drivers license should be sufficient as primary identification for the passport application. Can this please be clarified?

Hi there,

I am an attorney who represents a child welfare agency and my client has asked about the effects the implementation of the Real ID Act will have on undocumented youth. Specifically she is concerned about the ability of youths to access federal buildings/resources, since their IDs will not meet the standards outlined in the Act.

Currently the child's school ID or a Letter of Identification is sufficient, however, the Act seems to preclude those as options going forward.

Any solutions or answers would be greatly appreciated.

Keep up the good work!

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

While we have set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports this will not begin until Jan. 22, 2018. You will be able to utilize your driver's license domestically until then. After that date if your state is in compliance or extension status you will have until 2020. After the 2020 date it will be dependent upon the driver's license.

Subject: Real ID Compliance Question Regarding Air Travel

To Whom It May Concern,

In reviewing the information on the webpage I see that it shows that for domestic air travel that we have until October 1, 2020 to have a compliant ID (Exhibit 1). However on the REAL ID page (Exhibit 2) it shows that "The following states/territories have an extension, allowing Federal agencies to accept driver's licenses from these states until October 10, 2016." Texas is on this list.

Does this mean that Texans will be able to travel domestically without a REAL ID until October 1, 2020 or is this going to require Texans to travel with a REAL ID on October 10, 2016?

I look forward to hearing back from you. Thanks in advance for your assistance.

Exhibit 1:

<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-public-faqs>

Q: When will I need to change how I travel domestically?

Starting January 22, 2018, passengers who have driver's licenses issued by a state that is not yet compliant with REAL ID and that has not received an extension will need to show an alternative form of acceptable identification for domestic air travel. Please see TSA's website for a list of acceptable forms of identification. Passengers who have licenses issued by a state that is compliant or that has an extension to become compliant with REAL ID requirements may continue to use their licenses as usual. For a list of states already in compliance or with an extension visit DHS's REAL ID webpage. DHS continually updates this list as more states come into compliance or obtain extensions.

Starting October 1, 2020, every air traveler will need to present a REAL ID-compliant license or another acceptable form of identification for domestic air travel. A REAL ID compliant license is one that meets, and is issued by a state that complies with, the REAL ID Act's security standards.

Travelers can check DHS's REAL ID webpage at any time to learn if your state is compliant and can check with your state's agency that issues driver's licenses about how to acquire a compliant license. The earlier your state becomes compliant, the more likely you will be able to acquire a compliant license as part of the normal renewal cycle.

Exhibit 2:

Subject: IRS Meeting/Compliance

I recently tried to meet with the IRS representative however DHS would not let me enter the elevator to access the IRS rep because I did not have a drivers license or passport. I was told this was required and turned away. Is there a reason a matriculation ID should not work or other county issued ID? Some folks only have ITINS which are used to file tax returns. Otherwise undocumented. Does this mean undocumented taxpayers cannot enter federal buildings?

Thanks

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

While we have set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports this will not begin until Jan. 22, 2018. A passport will always be sufficient.

I am looking to fly from Grand Forks, ND to Mesa, AZ and I am wondering if my Minnesota license will be enough to allow me to fly. I don't have time to get an enhanced license or a passport. This is the first I've heard about this debate. I just want to clarify before I attempt to fly. Look forward to hearing back from you.

Our company has drivers who make deliveries to military and federal facilities in Illinois, Minnesota and Missouri. I understand that their driver's licenses will not be acceptable as identification effective immediately. Can you confirm this? What are the valid alternatives? Can they use a passport card instead of a passport book?

Hello-

I read on the TSA web site (<https://www.tsa.gov/travel/security-screening/identification>) that "A weapon permit is not an acceptable form of identification.", and I'd like to inquire as to why. I have a resident CCW permit for my home State, as well as a couple of non-resident permits for other States. One of the permits I have required fingerprinting, while all three required fairly extensive background checks. With the requirements for these permits being much stricter than for a Drivers License, and criminal background checks being necessary for each of them, I'd like to know why they would not suffice for identification under REAL ID. Thanks!

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

Hello

My mom is a US citizen and lives in Puerto Rico. She traveled to the US mainland for the holidays using a Puerto Rico driver's license and is returning to Puerto Rico on January 11, 2016. Can you please confirm that a Puerto Rico driver's license will still be a valid id for traveling on Jan 11, 2016? The attached link does not clearly state that. Thank you.

Good morning,

My fiancé is an Illinois resident and will be flying domestically on February 1, 2016. My understanding is that beginning January 10, 2016, the State of Illinois will no longer be in compliance with the Real ID law. Due to the change in compliance status, will my fiancé need a passport for his domestic flight on February 1, 2016?

Your assistance is greatly appreciated.

Thank you,

Once the TSA announcement has been made the travelers will have ample notice. This ample notice period will be sufficient enough time for individuals to obtain alternative identifications, if necessary.

Individuals traveling with driver's licenses will be fine in the new year.

You stated in your email that the TSA will continue to accept driver's licenses from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. How will this affect travel on February 1, 2016?

Thank you,

Hello

My son is graduating boot camp in San Diego CA on March 4th. I live in Illinois. According to the information that I can find, I will not need a passport or a REAL ID card as of that date to fly to CA, but may need it to enter the federal facility, MCRD in San Diego?

Is this correct?

Please advise!

Hello,

I read today that there are problems with Virginia's compliance with the Real ID Act that will cause the federal government to stop recognizing Virginia driver's licenses in October of 2016. Before I contact my state legislator concerning this, I would like to know what things are lacking in Virginia's licensing program.

Thank you very much for any information you can provide.

We will be traveling, by air, Jan 8th, 2016 and returning home Jan 29th. We have Illinois driver's license and are concerned regarding if they can be used as id for our return flight. We have read info on the TSA website which states Jan 10th is the expiry date for Illinois. But upon further reading we notices that there is a 120 day extension until further info is sent out. But then read there is no extension for Illinois.

We are a bit confused.

Would you please confirm if our Illinois state issued driver's license will be valid id for our return flights.

Thank you so much for your time and assistance.

I was reading the FAQ for the REAL ID on your website and I am still not fully understanding, so I am hoping someone can help me. I have a "regular" Minnesota drivers license. With the new laws that will be in effect in 2016 regarding valid identification, is my drivers license still a valid form of identification for a flight to Texas at the end of February 2016, or will I need a passport or an enhanced ID for this flight?

Thank you for your help!

 Subject: IL not REAL ID Compliant

My husband and I will be traveling in mid January within the United States traveling from IL to FL. We have heard news reports that IL State Driver's Licenses are not considered TSA compliant and we will need another form of ID at the airports. I have an up to date passport but my husband needs to renew his, and his passport expired in 2004. So it is unlikely that his will be renewed in time although he is starting the process.

We have read that we would have received 120 days notice if this is affecting our travel plans, but we also see that on your website that IL has not received a continuance and as of January 10th it must conform by the new rules. We would appreciate some clarifications as to our options for appropriate ID come January 17th.

Thank you so much.

Hello,

My name is (b)(6) and I will be flying on a trip from Albuquerque, NM to Portland, OR on January 18th. There is a lot of confusion around if a New Mexico driver's license will be acceptable by then. According to the DHS website updated on December 15th, 2015 it says that the public will be given at least 120 day's notice on when a license will not be acceptable anymore. However, I am hearing that on January 10th 2015 a New Mexico driver's license will no longer be accepted. Can you please clarify this for me as soon as possible. This is very confusing and there is now way I can get a passport by then.

Thank you for your very prompt response. I followed your last link (which was actually the one that prompted my inquiry) and found this on the sub-linked page:

<http://www.dhs.gov/real-id-enforcement-brief#>

From that page and the text list of states and their compliance status:

The following states/territories have not received an extension for 2016 and will be subject to enforcement beginning Jan. 10, 2016.

- Illinois
- Missouri
- New Mexico
- Washington

Last Published Date: December 29, 2015

So, in light of this change to the policy as of yesterday, can you point me to the textual section that states that Illinois residents will have 120 days from January 10, 2016 to continue to be allowed to fly using just an Illinois Drivers License?

Thank you again for your assistance.

I have heard that some state ID is not qualified for air travel this Jan 10, 2016; however some sources said that may be affected.

Therefore I would like to know more information about the real ID. I have a Washington State driver license, not enhanced once. So I still be use it as a standalone document for commercial air travel after Jan 10, 2016.

Correct. No one will be required to fly with a passport for domestic travel until the TSA enforcement date is set and they are from a non-compliant state at that time.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

Hello,

I am trying to find out information regarding the validity of California driver's licenses for air travel. I understand that California has been granted an extension until "at least" January 10. My parents are traveling from California to TN for my wedding the week of January 16, 2016. Will they be able to board the plane with only driver's licenses? We have minimal time to try to get them a passport if that is indeed our only option. They live in Fresno, CA and do not have the financial ability to take time off of work to travel to a US passport office in addition to trying to pay the expedited fees. Please help me to figure out what I/they need to do. Thank you for your time.

The REAL ID Act is being enforced as we speak. The state of California has received an extension for 2016 however, Illinois has not and therefore subject to enforcement.

Presenting an IL Driver's License should cause the guards to ask for an alternate id, such as a passport, or have an alternate procedure in place.

The facility in CA should be able to state those requirements to you.

Hi there, I travel periodically for work and have a few trips planned for January & March already for 2016.

I do not have a passport at this time. I was told that if I apply for an enhanced ID that I wouldn't have any issue boarding flights. I have applied for the enhanced ID this week, but it's taking 6 weeks for processing.

Now, after reading some articles floating around on Facebook, it almost sounds like the enhanced ID will not be enough and that I will really need a passport. Is that true?

Can you please provide me with some guidance until MN can get their act together? I don't want to get stranded or not be allowed on a flight because of this....especially since I travel with the President of my company.

Thanks,

You stated in your email that the TSA will continue to accept driver's licenses from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. How will this affect travel on February 1, 2016?

Thank you.

Good morning,

My fiancé is an Illinois resident and will be flying domestically on February 1, 2016. My understanding is that beginning January 10, 2016, the State of Illinois will no longer be in compliance with the Real ID law. Due to the change in compliance status, will my fiancé need a passport for his domestic flight on February 1, 2016?

Your assistance is greatly appreciated.

Thank you,

Thank you for your response. I see that Missouri does not have an extension as of now. As I noted in my original email I have a group of travelers traveling out of Missouri (with Missouri licenses) in late January. As per your email the public will be given ample advanced notice which on the website says 120 days. I have contacted the airlines and they say they have not yet been notified.

Can you please give me an update on this.

Hello,

I have a group of passengers from Oklahoma, Texas and Missouri traveling domestically in late January. It looks like Oklahoma and Texas both have extensions until October 2016 however Missouri is under review. I contacted the airlines and they said that they received a memo stating that as of now there are no changes and Dept. of Homeland Security will give ample notice (120 days). I want to be sure that my travelers have sufficient ID's when they travel next month. Can you please let me know the status of the Real Act and what they will need to travel.

Thank you very much.

I have an up to date passport but my husband needs to renew his, and his passport expired in 2004. So it is unlikely that his will be renewed in time although he is starting the process.

We have read that we would have received 120 days notice if this is affecting our travel plans, but we also see that on your website that IL has not received a continuance and as of January 10th it must conform by the new rules. We would appreciate some clarifications as to our options for appropriate ID come January 17th.

As you may be aware, The Associated Press reported last week that your department has told Missouri (and other states) that the exemption from the "REAL ID" law for state driver's licenses won't be continued past Jan. 10 (at least, for Missouri).

I'm working on a follow-up story to that AP story (copied below), to give my readers in Mid-Missouri a sense of HOW your change will/could affect them.

I have looked at the FAQs on your website (www.dhs.gov/real-id-public-faqs) and can use some of those answers in my story.

But I wanted to get more specific, if possible.

I called the federal courthouse in Jefferson City to see if the new rules would impact getting in to cover court proceedings. While the person I talked with did NOT think it would, I was told to contact Homeland Security.

So, here's my question: Is there a more detailed list of facilities that will or won't be affected by your department's decision no longer to accept a Missouri driver's license as an identification card, because it doesn't meet the 2005 federal law's requirements?

Your FAQs say the REAL ID law doesn't apply to "constitutionally protected activities (including a defendant's access to court proceedings)," but it doesn't indicate whether a reporter's First Amendment right to COVER those proceedings also is protected.

Does it affect access to either the Internal Revenue Service or the Social Security Administration offices where many people transact business with the federal government?

Also, some Missouri politicians argued (in 2009 and again recently) that the REAL ID law violates states' powers under the U.S. Constitution's 10th Amendment. Is there an official, DHS response to that argument?

Is there anything else you think the public needs to know about this decision, at this point?

As you can see, I also have copied a couple of local agencies that have federal government duties AND the two U.S. representatives who serve Mid-Missouri as well as the state's two U.S. senators.

THANK YOU for your assistance with these questions.

APNewsBreak: Feds won't accept Missouri driver's licenses

By DAVID A. LIEB

Associated Press

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) -- Missouri residents soon will not be able to use their state driver's licenses as identification to get into most federal facilities, making it one of at least five states to lose a federal exemption from complying with national proof-of-identity requirements.

A letter from the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to Missouri, obtained on Wednesday by The Associated Press, informs the state that its exemption from federal Real ID requirements will come to an end Jan. 10.

That means Missouri driver's licenses cannot be accepted as ID at military bases and most other federal facilities. It also could eventually mean that Missouri driver's licenses won't be accepted as identification for commercial airplane flights.

Illinois is in the same boat, according to Illinois Secretary of State's office spokesman David Druker, who said state officials learned late Tuesday that Homeland Security had denied an extension for compliance with federal requirements.

The 2005 Real ID act imposes tougher requirements for proof of legal U.S. residency in order for state driver's licenses to be valid for federal purposes. The law was passed in response to national security concerns after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

The Homeland Security Department previously declared Minnesota to be non-compliant, and it sent letters in October to New Mexico and Washington indicating that their exemptions also would end Jan. 10.

States originally were supposed to comply with the Real ID requirements by the end of 2009. Federal authorities have repeatedly delayed implementation to give time for states to change their driver's license procedures and make the necessary technological improvements.

At one point, about half the state legislatures had passed measures opposing the implementation of the Real ID Act. Some state lawmakers raised concerns that it amounted to an invasion of privacy and a backdoor attempt to create a standardized national ID card. Some of those states, including Missouri and Minnesota, still have laws specifically prohibiting them from complying.

But the patience of federal authorities appears to be coming to an end, and more states could lose their exemptions. Homeland Security also has been reviewing whether to grant a compliance exemption beyond Jan. 10 to Alaska, California, New Jersey and South Carolina. Nineteen others states recently received an extension of their compliance exemptions, most running until Oct. 16.

The Homeland Security Department has said it plans to announce soon whether it will begin enforcing the Real ID requirements for airplane travel. The department has said that it will provide at least 120-day advance notice before barring people from flights who have driver's licenses from states that are noncompliant or lack a waiver.

"As we continue the phased in enforcement of the REAL ID Act, the consequences of continued noncompliance will grow with each milestone," the department said in its letter to Missouri.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

Subject:	Question's on Washington State Commercial Air Travel After Jan 10, 2016
Date:	2015/12/29 15:11:39
Type:	Note

We are a Travel Agency in Washington State and we need clarification on Commercial Air Travel acceptable ID after January 10, 2016. Per the below dhs.gov website information, please find our questions below in red.

The following states/territories have not received an extension for 2016 and will be subject to enforcement beginning Jan. 10, 2016.

- Illinois
- Missouri
- New Mexico
- Washington

"Phase 4: Boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft. A driver's license or identification card from a noncompliant state may only be used in conjunction with an acceptable second form of ID for boarding federally regulated commercial aircraft." What is considered an "acceptable second form of ID" for Washington State commercial air travel departures? Is it the below TSA list?

TSA's List.

Adult passengers 18 and over must show valid identification at the airport checkpoint in order to travel.

- Driver's licenses or other state photo identity cards issued by Department of Motor Vehicles (or equivalent) For Washington State, will the standard Driver's licenses be removed from this list after January 10, 2016 and the Enhanced Driver's Licenses (EDLs) be added? If so, travelers are already booking travel for January 10th and beyond. Shouldn't this be updated now?
- U.S. passport
- U.S. passport card
- DHS trusted traveler cards (Global Entry, NEXUS, SENTRI, FAST)
- U.S. military ID (active duty or retired military and their dependents, and DoD civilians)
- Permanent resident card
- Border crossing card
- DHS-designated enhanced driver's license
- Airline or airport-issued ID (if issued under a TSA-approved security plan)

- Federally recognized, tribal-issued photo ID
- HSPD-12 PIV card
- Foreign government-issued passport
- Canadian provincial driver's license or Indian and Northern Affairs Canada card
- Transportation worker identification credential

Below is more dhs.gov website information and questions:

Do I need a passport for domestic air travel starting January 2016?

A: No. DHS is in the process of scheduling plans for implementing REAL ID enforcement at airports. DHS will ensure that the traveling public has ample notice (at least, 120 days) before any changes are made that might affect their travel planning.

Until enforcement at the airports begins, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept state-issued driver's licenses and identification cards from all states, as well other forms of acceptable identification listed on the TSA website.

This information comes from the dhs.gov "Public FAQ's". Does this need to be updated? Hasn't DHS already scheduled plans? For example: Washington State will be implemented on January 10, 2016. If a commercial traveler does not have an EDL Washington State driver's licenses, they will need one of the other TSA listed forms of ID, which for many travelers will be a passport....right?

Can I use my driver's license to board an aircraft?

Yes. Until otherwise announced, the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions.

DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

This information also comes from the dhs.gov "Public FAQ's" Does this also need updating? After January 10, 2016, commercial travelers will not be able to use standard driver's licenses to board an aircraft in Illinois, Missouri, New Mexico and Washington...right? Shouldn't we be telling these travelers now?

Description and Schedule of Enforcement Phases

The following enforcement measures are cumulative, with measures in each phase remaining in effect through successive phases. Each phase will begin with a 3-month period where agencies will provide notice to individuals attempting to use driver's licenses or identification cards from noncompliant states but still allow access. After this period is over, agencies will no longer accept such identification for entry to Federal facilities, and individuals will need to follow the agency's alternate procedures (to be made available by the agency).

Does this mean that after January 10, 2016 when traveling with a Illinois, Missouri, New Mexico or Washington “standard” driver’s license, travelers will be allowed to travel on commercial aircraft for 3-month’s with warning/notification?

Thank you in advance for clarification.

Subject: REAL ID State question and concerning your .gov website

Greetings

I'm sending this email concerning on the REAL ID Act and something that has been bothering me because the website doesn't answer my question since the map with the states have a "#" null in the link if you click on the state. I live in Puerto Rico, the DTOP agency that deals with the identification cards have a very vague information on the REAL ID Act information concerning Puerto Rico and I wanted to know of the digital licenses id cards, the ones that are made of hard plastic and with a digital scan code in the back passes the real ID requirements since they say it was part of the process during 2008. And if the extension for the id given to Puerto Rico that ends in January 10, 2016 are the ones for the ID's that are not like the one I mentioned but for the ones that are provisional and made of laminated plastic that is easily bended??? My ID is the hard digital ones with the bar code in the rear that was issued in 2010.

Thanks in advance and have a nice day.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

To whom may concern,

According to the establishment of the Real ID Act, states and territories must comply with the deadline established or had submitted an extension to be in compliance for travelers to be able to travel via airports. Now my question is in regards to cruise ships. Does anyone who still not having a passport and who's state or territory still not in compliance, will that person be able to take that cruise?

I have a scheduled cruise coming up in January 24 and even though my wife and I have a passport, I have a little 2 yrs old daughter who doesn't and friends that will be on that cruise that don't have a passport yet. I would like some info on this issue. Thanks for your time.

I am currently planning on traveling in January for an internship I was selected for at Walt Disney World in Florida. I am a resident of Puerto Rico, and I was born in Oklahoma. All of the ID's I have been issued here, except my birth certificate, which is from Oklahoma. Will I encounter any problems getting on my flight if all I have is my PR license, OK birth certificate and PR Social security card?

Also, I am traveling with my mother, and she does not have a passport either. She has a PR license and PR birth certificate.

Look forward to hearing back from you.

Good Afternoon,

Colorado Springs Utilities allows U.S. States Drivers licenses to be used for physical access to facilities.

DHS website depicts that the following states are either in non-compliant or in grace period to Jan 2016: (Minnesota, Illinois, Missouri, New Mexico, Washington, and California)

Open source research shows the U.S. States listed by DHS in non-compliant status or under a grace period to Jan 2016, that their states drivers licenses meet the following components: person's name, person's photo, person's date of birth, and their signature.

Based on DHS Website, the states above are missing components in complying with the Real ID act and these drivers licenses may not be acceptable as proof for flying shortly (120 days).

Are these states not meeting the readable information or the acceptance of certain documents to prove U.S. citizenship?

Would you clarify as Colorado Springs Utilities does not want to accept a State Driver's license for physical access to facilities that is not acceptable by DHS.

Thank you.

Subject: Driver License as an ID to travel from PR to DC

Greetings,

A friend, will be traveling from Puerto Rico (PR) to Washington, DC the 1.7.2016. She will be heading back to PR on January 11,216. We plan and bought the flight tickets weeks ago. Her only ID is her PR Driven License.

Would she be able to travel back to PR after the new law starting on January 11,2016?using her PR Driven License?

Any information on this matter will be helpful.

Thanks for your help and time,

Subject: Traveling as a NH Resident

Will NH be able to travel on airlines domestically feb 1st 2016?

What are additional documentation required to be used in conjunction with non complying state drivers liscense?

Thanks

An inquiry from the Nebraska DMV for your action.

It went to the Junk email, hence the delay.

I don't see this information on your website, but it was my understanding that if we issue a Real ID compliant driver's license, which Nebraska does, the license must be marked accordingly. Although the State of Mississippi is a Real ID compliant state (see your map) – they do not mark the license with any sort of indicator. What I find on your website is that if the state issues non-compliant documents – they must indicate that in the barcode on the back of the document. Nowhere on your website does it indicate that Real ID compliant cards must have a special marking on them. So do Real ID compliant cards need to have an indicator on them or not? If not – how will other states know they are Real ID compliant and when they became so (since no dates are on your map). Thank you very much for your help.

Thank you for contacting the Office of State Issued ID Support.

We have not set the date for REAL ID enforcement at the airports except for notifying the public that the Transportation Security Administration (TSA) will continue to accept driver's licenses and state-issued identification cards from all jurisdictions at least until 2016. DHS will ensure the public has ample advanced notice before identification requirements for boarding aircraft change. That notice will include information on the process for individuals with a non-compliant driver's license or identification card to be able to travel by aircraft.

You can find an acceptable list of ID's for airline travel from TSA here:
<http://www.tsa.gov/traveler-information/acceptable-ids>

If a child is younger than 18, they are not required to have ID to travel. They'll just need their boarding pass.

what is the proper I.D. for a person under 16 (age they can receive a driver's license)?

How many I.D.'s does someone 16 or younger need to board a flight?

Thank you

Would a passport card be considered a valid form of secondary government ID to fly or does one have to have the passport book? I only fly domestically.

Color coding the map would not comply with the law and those with visual impairments would not be able to see the differentiation. We are currently working with our website development team to make enhancements to our website. Please feel free to check back with the upcoming changes.

Just a suggestion, but why does the Real ID map on State status require that users roll over every state to figure out what the status is? Why not just color code the map and put a legend on it.
 Every state and territory falls into a uniform category:

Compliant
 Under review — grace period to at least January 10, 2016
 Under review — grace period to June 1, 2016
 Under review — grace period to October 10, 2016
 Non-compliant — federal officials may accept IDs
 Non-compliant

This would allow a user to capture all the info he or she needs at a glance.

Regards
